Block Island's Season Hearing End

Will Close on September 5 After Which it Will Run on the New Shoreham's Route For a Month.

For the first time since Sunday, the steamer Block Island made the trip through to the island on Wednesday, and the passage was again safely negotiated on Thursday. It was a tough trip, however, and but one or two of the few passengers who went down the river boarded the boat at New London continued past Watch Hill. Only a few were brought back. Just after reaching Watch Hill Tuesday, Captain Hazard became ill and the trip was abandoned. First Pilot Avery of the steamers of the Block Island line has guided the ship for the past two days, but Captain Hazard is improving at his home on the East Side and will be able to resume command of the Block Island before the season closes on Sept. 5. He is a genial and capable officer and the patrons of the steamer have received excellent treatment this summer.

After the summer season is over the steamer is to ply between Providence and Block Island for a month's time, at the end of which time it is expected the New Shoreham, which is expected to be in the harbor, will be ready to take over the route.

WATCHMAN TAFT'S
72D BIRTHDAY
Man in Charge of Steamer Block Island at Night Celebrates Today.

Today marks the reaching of the 72d milestone of life for Fred B. Taft, 34 North Main street, who now lives on Crystal avenue, New London.
The fact should be expressed in nautically, however, inasmuch as for the past decade Mr. Taft has been considerable of "life on the ocean wave," even in the prosaic position of watchman on the steamer Block Island on which well known craft he is still very much on the job.

After the war of years with the ruddy dog of health in his face, every night finds Mr. Taft at his post, 11-tending the part of a man who has taken on a couple of years of the usual allotment of the strong, and who bids fair to keep up the race with Father Time for a good many years to come. As an employee he has always been found conscientious and faithful, and summer and winter he has guarded his charge well.

Indian fighting, scouting in civil war days and steamboating are three things at which Mr. Taft can look back upon that have furnished experiences that made life interesting. Happenings have been many, and he has seen plains or on southern battlefields come fresh to his mind, and it is most interesting to friends of the veteran to hear him recount tales of former days.

A Massachusetts boy, Mr. Taft claims, was the first to see the place of his birth on September 1, 1839. At the age of 7 he began a nomadic career, that during the years that followed took him pretty well over the country. At 19, as a member of Troop F, Second Massachusetts cavalry, he was sent west from Boston against the Indians, who were making trouble among the settlements.

Two years of campaigning followed, under General Harney, during which time he crossed the Rockies three times each way, and encountered Blackfeet, Sioux, Pawnee, and Com-anches at various points in the western country. Just as the Indian difficulties were nearly settled, the civil war broke out from Fort Laramie, in what is now Wyoming, but then belonged to the territory of Dakota.
Mr. Taft was sent to the front, where he remained in the army until the end of the war.

He came through the Indian skirmishes and the war with only a few scratches, although he went through hardships, especially on the plains. One night it was so cold that five horses froze to death, and sleeping in the snow with only poncho and blanket for protection was sometimes a necessity. For eighteen months they lived in the open, and the winter started out in the tropic, 45 came back.

After the war, Mr. Taft returned to Pittsburg, Mass., where he began setting up machinery. Later, coming to Norwich, he set up looms at the woolen mill at Norwich Town then owned by the late Andrew P. Sturtevant, and foreman there for nine years. About 20 years ago he moved to New London, where he followed up the same business before going on the Block Island.

Mr. Taft was married 48 years ago at Pittsfield to Miss Augusta L. Keeler and they are now living happily in New London. They have four children and four grandchildren.

AT THE AUDITORIUM.
Vaudeville and Motion Pictures.

Well pleased audiences saw the semi-weekly change of bill on Thursday at the Auditorium, and both the audience numbers and the pictures were put down as being of the first quality.
The program of the evening was by the liberal applause that was forthcoming both in the afternoon and in the evening.

The program of gymnastic and balancing stunts, the King Brothers have a turn that gives opportunity for a wonderful display of strength and agility.
The dive with which they wind up their act being a thriller.

Howe and Edward furnish the top-line attraction in the sketch. The Artist of comedy, the former having been a member of the great comedy team of comedians, Howe and Doyle. Their program of skit is overflowing with laughs and the audience is sure to enjoy the program that is the season's best.
The Elks at Atlantic City is a film that received many complimentary remarks, while the other pictures were clear and interesting.

PRESTON CITY PASTOR WAS ELECTED PRESIDENT.

Fifty-fourth Annual Meeting of Stonington Union Sunday School Convention.

In spite of the rain, which fell in torrent at the most inopportune time Wednesday, the fifty-fourth annual meeting of the Stonington Union Sunday school convention, held at the Po-quonoc Bridge Baptist church was a decided success. The number that braved the storm was an encouragement to all connected with the meeting, and the gathering of enthusiastic workers was a credit to the spirit of the Stonington union churches.

The convention opened at 9:30 with a praise service conducted by Rev.
Clifton K. Flanders. At 10 o'clock Rev.
Henry E. Anderson gave a devotional talk, after which the meeting came to the business of the convention.

Officers were elected as follows: President, N. B. Prindle of Preston; vice president, J. H. Adams, (Stonington); secretary and treasurer, G. R. Atha of Groton. Captain Wilcox of Mystic was elected auditor.

After this business Rev. G. R. Atha delivered an address and offered suggestions taken from the school letters. Rev. Clifton K. Flanders completed the morning session by giving an interesting talk on Sunday School Bible lessons.

The convention adjourned for an hour and a half, during which space of time the ladies of the Poquonoc church furnished a very palatable meal.

On the programme for the afternoon was a business session. Rev. Well-come E. Bates gave the only talk of the afternoon, and kept his hearers interested with his address on "Decision." There were upwards of 200 in attendance.

TUCKERBUNG ASSOCIATION
Had a Dinner at Clubhouse Instead of Clam bake—Attendance of Fifty.

Nothing like a rain storm prevents the Tuckerbung association from holding its annual dinner and dance. Usually it is a clam bake, but it was not possible to prepare the bake outdoors.
The members of the association, who followed the Tuckerbung house to fifty, who spent the greater part of the day at the clubhouse on Poquenunc Cove, and reported a delightful time on their return. The menu was as follows: Clam chowder, baked potatoes, creamed corn, new potatoes, broiled steak, sliced tomatoes, sliced onions and cucumbers, fried chicken, and a Maryland clam fritter watermelon.
A feature of the afternoon was the interesting story telling by George William Waite, the veteran guest from Boston, who is a winner with his tales.

Those from out of town included:
George B. Thayer, J. A. Wagner, M. E.
Glenason and Elmer F. Hines of Providence; George A. Hancock, C. S.
Brewster, and Charles E. Ricker of North Attleboro; George William Waite of Boston; William Dyon of Philadelphia; Messrs. Wilcox, Shea, Turk, and others. The association was held at the clubhouse on Poque-nunc Cove, and the dinner was served by William S. Chappell of New London.

tration papers on the governor of Massachusetts for the extradition of Nathanial P. Colchester and his brother, retary, the party was read giving a list of a dozen speakers and the conditions on which they may be secured for the local party.

NORWICH TOWN
Rain Already Helping Wells and Springs—First Friday Devotions—Brief Personal.

The rain or the past week has helped and wells and springs in this vicinity. There is nine feet of water in a well on the old Canterbury turn-pike could be pumped from it. Another well on Plain Hill in which the water was too low to use is now two-thirds full. Spring supplies are well up.

Taftville road is steadily rising a few inches at a time. A well on the Scottland road which had completely failed containing water, is now running.
Deep wells have not been affected.
The well on T. R. Beetham's place on Wequous Hill has never failed.
This rain has at yet failed to help some wells which have been dry for many weeks.
